

Human Rights, Civil Liberties and Democracy

A conference for law students, trainee solicitors and pupil barristers

Saturday 14 March 2009

10am – 5pm

Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer

Northcliffe House entrance, 28 Tudor Street, London EC4Y 0AY

£10 (£5 to JUSTICE members)

Keynote Speaker:

Baroness Helena Kennedy QC

Human rights are an established part of the legal landscape. Human rights principles inform policy making at all levels, and human rights arguments are commonplace in hearings – from the magistrates court to the House of Lords and beyond.

Human rights law is no longer a marginal interest. As budding lawyer, you cannot afford to be ignorant of the law and practice in this area.

This one-day conference gives the lawyers of tomorrow a unique insight into:

- The key principles underpinning human rights, civil liberties and democracy
- Human rights in adversity – counter-terrorism policy and practice since 9/11
- Human rights in action – interactive workshops on fair trial rights
- Human rights and the constitution – the Human Rights Act and a British Bill of Rights
- Human rights at work – the potential for a career as a human rights lawyer

Organised by

A conference for law students, trainee solicitors and pupil barristers

PROGRAMME

09.45 Coffee and Registration

10.00 Welcome

Clarissa O'Callaghan, Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer

10.10 JUSTICE and human rights – an introduction

Roger Smith, director of JUSTICE

10.20 Human rights, civil liberties and democracy

Baroness Helena Kennedy QC,

chair of JUSTICE Council

Democracy and human rights are sometimes seen as opposed to each other. In truth, they are integrally linked. Respect for, and understanding of, human rights complement, and are key parts of, any functioning democracy.

11.00 Human rights and counter-terrorism – principles, challenges and resolutions

Eric Metcalfe, JUSTICE

The Human Rights Act came into force less than a year before the events of 9/11. Since then, the response to terrorism has provided a challenge to the fledgling human rights legislation well beyond whatever could have been expected. The consequence has been a dialogue between courts and Parliament. What have been the difficult issues and how have they been resolved?

11.30 Coffee Break

12.00 Workshops based on case studies: fair trial and Article 6 ECHR

These interactive workshops provide an opportunity to examine key issues in detail. Delegates should choose one workshop – documentation for all three workshops will be included in the delegate pack.

1 Anonymous witnesses

Sally Ireland, JUSTICE

The Crown Prosecution Service wants to use an anonymous witness to implicate a defendant in a 'street gang' related murder. In what circumstances (if any) would this be appropriate? What safeguards should be in place?

2 The European Arrest Warrant

Jodie Blackstock, JUSTICE

A Bulgarian magistrate has issued a Eurowarrant for the return from the UK of a defendant in relation to alleged fraud. The defendant, a UK national, says he is not guilty and that the case is a vendetta against him by a local mafia chief and he will not get a fair trial. Can he successfully refuse to go?

3 Secret evidence

Eric Metcalfe, JUSTICE

The Home Secretary imposes a control order but wishes to withhold key evidence from the defendant on the basis that it would endanger national security. What are the relevant principles at stake?

1.00 Sandwich lunch

2.00 Human rights and the constitution

Roger Smith, JUSTICE

The Human Rights Act led indirectly to the demise of the ancient role of the Lord Chancellor. It has also caused major debate about the role of the judiciary in holding the executive and Parliament accountable to human rights principles. The Act has become very controversial: the Conservative Party argues for its repeal. How is the constitution changing under the influence of the Human Rights Act?

2.30 A British bill of rights: good idea or not?

Bob Grindrod, BVC, Nottingham Law School

Julia Bartholomew, BVC, City University

Connor Johnston, MA conversion course, Sheffield University

Marija Brackovic, GDL, College of Law

Poonam Pattni, GDL, College of Law

Chair: Wafa Shah, ex-intern, JUSTICE

Both the government and opposition have argued for a 'British bill of rights' to supplement – or even replace – the Human Rights Act. Would a homegrown bill of rights extend or restrict rights?

3.30 Tea

4.00 Human rights careers – a panel discussion

Tom Hickman, Blackstone Chambers

Patrick Doris, Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer

Richard de Friend, College of Law

Roger Smith, JUSTICE

What kind of careers will allow you to develop an interest in human rights? Can you realistically practise human rights within a career at the Bar? In a City firm? In a legal aid practice? As a government lawyer? Anywhere else?

4.45 Taking the JUSTICE Student Human Rights Network forward

Hayley Smith, JUSTICE

The network has now held two conferences, a number of training seminars and is in its third year of producing electronic bulletins. What have you thought worthwhile? How might we take the network further? How could we integrate it more within JUSTICE's core work?

5.00 Finish
